

As a flight attendant, I am very concerned about the use of cell phones on our aircraft. My concerns are:

1. Terrorists could coordinate an attack while on the aircraft.
2. It would create an additional level of hostility onboard the aircraft between those looking for a quiet, restful flight and those who wish to talk on their phone during the entire flight.
3. There is no conclusive evidence that cell phones do not, beyond a reasonable doubt, interfere with the aircraft navigational systems.
4. The use of cell phones onboard would prohibit passengers from listening to and hearing our safety briefings and safety demos before take-off.

Thank you for your attention in this matter. I hope that my first-hand logic will help you come to the proper decision in this matter.

Sincerely,

Timothy M. Lynch

Flight Attendant
